

Market dynamics - European market, week 18 (April 2015)

The market remained difficult in April. Storms in Northern Europe just before the Easter week meant the closure of the port of Rotterdam and delayed vessels, lorries and trucks complicated the logistic generating lack of products. Easter sales have concentrated in few days and prices remained low for most tropical and off-season fruits; the products that registered high prices have generated a lower demand or joined undersupplied markets in which the demand could not be met.

Avocado – The market has been exceptionally undersupplied and prices reached historical levels. The supply from the Mediterranean sources is practically over and volumes of hass from Peru will be consistent only in mid-May; from then onwards, prices should start to decrease. The green segment benefited of the undersupply context registering high prices: as the season from South Africa is developing with increasing volumes, prices tended to diminish at the end of the month but are forecast to be stable in the next few weeks.

Berries – Active market due to a lower supply and higher demand associated with Easter; the season has now ended for the Southern Hemisphere sources.

Beans – High prices but narrower price range for the beans from Kenya and West Africa.

Dates – First arrivals from South Africa.

Grapes – Favourable market with positive demand for white grapes whose price ranges are divided depending on origins; good demand and active market for the red seedless grapes even if quotations are below those of the last season; positive market for red globe whose supply remained limited and prices were higher than last year.

Kaki – First arrivals of kaki from Brazil; the fruits from South Africa should reach the market in weeks 19-20.

Kiwi – The stock of Italian kiwifruit on the market are still high (16% more than the last season at the same date) and the supply from Chile is entering the market; the first arrivals of kiwifruit from New Zealand are expected at the beginning of May.

Lime – Prices have been on average, with large price range, because of the thin supply from Brazil and lack of fruits from Mexico; quotations suddenly increased in week 18 reaching 11,00-12,00 Euro/ctn.

Lychees – The first air freighted lychees from Thailand are on the market; prices are extremely high, exceeding 12,00 Euro/kg.

Mango – Small volumes on the market and satisfactory prices, as usual in this part of the year. The season from Burkina Faso, Ivory Coast and Mali started with the varieties amelie and valencia obtaining good prices; very small volumes have been sent until now by sea but will start to increase with the next boats; fruits are in perfect condition and the season is expected to be favourable if the rains will not affect its continuation.

Beginning of season also for Guatemala, Mexico and Costa Rica, with small volumes for now. Exports from India will be considerably smaller this year as unseasonal weather will strongly affect production volumes and generated high prices in the local market.

Melons – Higher prices, particularly for honeydew, galia and watermelons, because of declining volumes from overseas sources and milder temperatures; the seasons from Morocco and Senegal are ongoing and the European production is entering the market.

Pineapple – With increased stocks due to the high prices recorded in the last weeks, prices started to decrease and sales proved difficult, particularly for small sizes which have been offered at relatively low prices.

Stone fruits – The campaign for off-season fruits is near to an end; volumes declined for peaches and nectarines with a demand sufficient for the supply; prices were higher than last year but lower than in 2012-2013. Complicated market and decreasing prices, lower than in the previous season, for plums due to low demand. The first availabilities of from Morocco are obtaining very good prices.

Forecasts for the incoming season of peaches and nectarines indicate that the total crop will be just 1% over the last season, being +3% for peaches and -

1% for nectarines, while the production of apricots is set to fall 4%; a huge increase in the production of flat peaches is expected in comparison to the average 2009-2013 (+230%). As far as the imports of citrus from the Southern Hemisphere are concerned, the forecasts indicate that lemon exports to all markets should see the biggest rise climbing +4%, soft citrus and grapefruit will increase +3% and oranges are set to rise +0,3%.

The market in May could be conditioned by three short weeks.
